Part III Cloze (10 marks)

Section A (5 marks)

Read the following passage and fill in the blanks with the correct forms of 5 words or phrases out of the 7 given in the box. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

doubt; in total; little; novel; on average; principal; surprise

Research by U.S. and Canadian scientists suggests that the brains of men and women differ structurally in ways that may explain differences in mental ability. Men's brains are larger than women's, (36) _____ because men are larger in all respects. But the isthmus of the corpus callosum, which links the right and left halves of the brain, is generally larger in women than in men, according to a number of different studies reported to the New York Academy of Sciences.

Since these fibres represent the main highway within the brain, the researchers believe it may explain why, (37) _____, women have a superior ability with words to men and why girls are less often dyslexic than boys. Some researchers believe the physical difference may also explain why men are generally better at tasks involving spatial relationships, such as engineering and reading maps. Speculating even further, the sexing of brains (an infant science) may account for the fact that there have been more women poets and (38) _____ than female painters and sculptors.

Such research has been discouraged by feminists for a long time. They fear that it might be used to justify male-female differences which they maintain are result of unfair social attitudes and conditioning. Scientists admit that the physical differences between male and female brains may have a (39) _____ important effect than education and experience.

But at a recent meeting of the New York Academy, the largest claims for a physically significant difference between the sexes, other than the obvious and well-researched ones, were made by women. Sandra Witelson, a Canadian neuropsychologist, said the differences in size already mentioned may be “just the tip of the iceberg ... The physical structure of men’s and women’s brains may be far more different than we suspect.” But men were (40) _____ about the importance of the finding that women had a larger isthmus in their corpus callosum. A male scientist said, “In the brain, bigger doesn’t always mean better.”

Section B (5 marks)

Read the following passage and fill in each blank with one word in one of the following three ways: according to the context, by using the correct form of the given word, or by using the given letter(s) of the word. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

To a chorus of angry shouts and insults, a wealthy Chicago couple have been charged with child cruelty after leaving their daughters, aged four and nine, alone at home while they spent Christmas on the beach at Acapulco, Mexico.

Acapulco, is a city, municipality and major seaport in the state of Guerrero on the Pacific coast of Mexico, 380 kilometres south of Mexico City. Acapulco is located on a deep, semicircular bay and has been a port since the early colonial period of Mexico’s history. It is a port of call for shipping and cruise lines (41) _____ (run) between Panama and San Francisco, California, the United States. Acapulco is the largest city in the state, far larger than the state capital Chilpancingo. Acapulco is also Mexico’s largest beach and resort city.

The city is one of Mexico’s oldest beach resorts, (42) _____ came into prominence in the 1940s through 1960s as a getaway for Hollywood stars and millionaires. Acapulco is still famous and still attracts many tourists, although most are now from Mexico itself.

The couple enjoyed themselves in the city during Christmas. David Schoo, aged forty-five, and his wife Sharon, aged thirty-five, were handcuffed by waiting police, surrounded by reporters and insulted by onlookers after their return (43) fl _____ from Mexico landed at Chicago's O'Hare airport. The couple were immediately taken to jail, where they'll stay until their trial.

Police said the daughters, Diana, aged four, and Nicole, aged nine, had been left on their own in the Schoos' suburban Chicago home on 20 December when their parents set off for their ten-day holiday. Before they left, the couple had pinned up a note in the kitchen telling the girls exactly what to wear on snowy days. It also included a strict (44) _____ (remind) to Diane and Nicole about the time they should go to bed. They even remembered to tell them when and where to leave the Christmas cookies for Santa Claus.

There is clear evidence to show that the Schoos were quite determined to have an uninterrupted, trouble-free holiday, even if this meant neglecting their children. "Who could ever think that as parents they would go away to enjoy themselves for ten days?" The elder daughter Nicole told a local television station, "For a long time I felt really bad, wondering what they were doing and where they were, and how I'd get in touch with them if I needed to."

"How could anybody ever do this to their kids especially at Christmas time?" asked Connie Stadelmann, a neighbour. As soon as the Schoos' plane landed, police boarded it and arrested them before they had unfastened their seat-belts.

Ms Stadelmann discovered the girls' plight on 21 December after the children accidentally set off a home fire alarm. Although they had left a fully-stocked refrigerator, they had not given their children an emergency telephone (45) con _____ in Acapulco. "I asked them where their mom and dad were. They said Mexico".

The girls were looked after by another family, while, unable to trace their parents, Chicago police were forced to monitor passenger lists on all flights from Mexico. She said the girls had run screaming and barefoot through the snow to her house.

The sun-tanned couple were led through a crowd of reporters, but declined to comment. According to one of the arresting officers, they didn't even ask how their children were. The Schoos have been charged with child abandonment as well as cruelty.

Part IV Reading Comprehension (30 marks)

There are three passages in this part. Each passage is followed by several questions. Respond to the questions using information from the passage. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

Section A (10 marks)

Questions 46 to 50 are based on the following passage.

Shanxi province nurtures an ancient civilization in the mid-section of the Yellow River, with picturesque natural scenery and cultural relics that showcase its important role in Chinese history.

China's second largest waterfall, the Hukou, is located on the border of Shanxi and Shaanxi provinces, about 45 kilometers from Jixian county, Linfen city.

Hukou, which literally means the spout of a teapot, vividly describes the magnificent scene when the 400-meter-wide Yellow River is blocked by mountains and suddenly pours through a deep groove of 30 to 50 meters' width.

(46) _____

Beyond the scenery, the Yellow River is the cradle of ancient Chinese civilization. Located in the northeast of Xiangfen county, Linfen city, the Taosi ruins span an area of about 2.8 million square meters and a history of 4,100 to 4,300 years.

Archaeologists have researched the site since 1978 and announced their discoveries.

They believe that Taosi was the capital of the sage emperor Yao, who lived in the middle reaches of the Yellow River at that time. (47) _____

The new studies indicate the existence of a civilized and hierarchical society, with fortifications such as walls and moats, funerary objects of wood furniture and kitchenware, and function areas including a royal palace, living area for nobles and mausoleums.

In 1984, the earliest Chinese characters were found on a pottery in the ruins. Experts identified one character as wen (literary), and argued the others looked like yao (the emperor Yao), yi (change) and ming (life).

(48) _____

In the Tang Dynasty (AD 618—907), Emperor Li Longji ordered the fabrication of eight iron oxen and eight iron men on the banks of the Yellow River, which were used to rivet the pontoon bridge of an ancient ferry, now long gone. The figures were later buried by silt as the river shifted; they were rediscovered in 1988 in Yongji city, Shanxi province.

Each ox is about 1.9 meters tall, 3 meters long and 1.3 meters wide, and weighs 40 tons. Under each tail is a horizontal shaft to fix the bridge.

At present, half of the iron figures no longer guard the Yellow River, but stand on the ground as relics of the ancient ferry. The oxen look muscular and majestic, stretching their chests and hind legs. (49) _____ The remaining four pairs of man and beast are located about 360 meters away and remain underground.

Those who want to worship at temples can visit Yongji city's Pujiu Temple, the place where the love story of the drama Romance of the West Chamber took place in the Tang Dynasty.

Yuncheng city, only one hour's drive from Yongji city, is home to the largest Guandi Temple in China. It's dedicated to Guan Yu, a famous general during the Three Kingdoms Period (AD 220—280), who was born in Yuncheng.

(50) _____ Iron figures of men with lions on the temple grounds indicate that foreign envoys presented lions as gifts to the Chinese nation.

If you go, Linfen city is more than 260 kilometers from Taiyuan, the capital city of Shanxi province. Yongji city is about 200km from Linfen city and 60km from Yuncheng city. It's convenient to take trains or drive to these cities.

Questions 46 to 50

Choose from the sentences A to G the one which best fits each gap of 46 to 50. There are two extra sentences which you do not need to use.

- A. Tang Dynasty of Ancient China, a time of peace, prosperity, and inventions such as gunpowder, printing, and porcelain.
  - B. In winter, the waterfall turns into a frozen world of ice pillars and columns—a different kind of natural beauty.
  - C. Originally built in AD 589, the traditional complex has been rebuilt and expanded in the following centuries.
  - D. The local government has applied to build a national park on the Taosi site to protect the ruins, display the various antiques and promote the archaeological discoveries.
  - E. An ox, also known as a bullock in Australia and India, is a bovine trained as a draft animal.
  - F. It is recorded that Yao built his capital at Pingyang, the ancient name for Linfen, but there was no archaeological proof before.
  - G. It took seven years to remove rust from the sculptures and build a platform 12.2 meters above the original site for visitors.

Section B (10 marks)

Questions 51 to 55 are based on the following passage.

You are going to read a magazine article written by a wildlife photographer, Jenny Laverne.

I suppose you could say I've been passionate about wildlife since I was a child. One of my earliest memories is of getting keen on fishing in a stream near our house, and while I was standing there waiting for the fish to bite, I'd start noticing all the wildlife. I'd rush home and tell my parents all about the animals and birds I'd seen. Later on I learnt a lot from my uncle, who's very knowledgeable about birds, and I watched every wildlife series there was on TV. Then I bought my first camera, and a photographer was born!

I'm completely self-taught, as I don't believe you can learn a skill by sitting in a classroom. That said, friends and colleagues say you get a lot out of attending courses—it just isn't my experience, so I wouldn't recommend it. Of course once you've learnt the basics, it might be fun to be a member of a photographic club, so you can work on projects together.

I'm busy all the time now that I'm better known, and I work spring, summer, autumn, winter, with hardly a break sometimes—not something I need or want to do, but I've got into the routine of it. I have to get the most out of each day, so I often find myself making notes for articles, say, or editing images, maybe, while waiting in a hide for a bird to appear. I try to be patient, but luckily there's usually nobody to hear if I get across and start muttering to myself!

The south-west is my home and that's where I take most of my photos. It's not that I mind driving or even flying further afield, I just feel there's such a diversity of subjects here, from red deer to field voles, so I'm lucky to have them on my doorstep. I always ask my friends to tell me when they happen to spot an interesting or unusual animal if they're out walking, but they don't often remember! But I do sometimes get tip-offs from members of the public or wildlife organisations operating locally.

I've been working as a wildlife photographer for ten years now and have a pretty strong reputation, though I say so myself. I use the most sophisticated cameras and lenses I can get hold of, but that doesn't make me different from any other professional photographer. And I put in a lot of hours, but again, that's something we all have to do.

I think what I'm known for is being able to come up with exceptional images in adverse conditions. And wildlife is a popular area at the moment. Of course, it's not my only area of expertise. I dabble in country sports, conservation projects and landscape shots as well.

I'm proud to say that almost all the subjects in my images are taken in the wild—under no circumstances are the animals put under any stress or their habitats disturbed, and where necessary I obtain the appropriate licence. I've very occasionally photographed captive subjects, but only if a particular commission—a request from an owner, perhaps—requires this, or if I've been asked to do so by the Secret World Animal Rescue Centre, which I'm happy to work with.

My range of clients varies from someone just wanting a picture to hang in their sitting room, to picture libraries and major wildlife charities. I've been fortunate enough to win a couple of international competitions. A while ago I spent ages checking the proofs of a book of what I think are my most beautiful photos—it's out in the shops now, in fact. Something I haven't done, which would be fun, is to travel round the country showing a selection of my images at local art galleries and libraries. I like the idea of making contact with the public. But who knows what else will occur to me?

Questions 51 to 55

Answer the following questions with the information given in the passage.

51. What attracted Jenny's attention while she was fishing as a child?
52. How did Jenny learn photography?
53. What does Jenny say makes her different from other professional photographers?
54. What does Jenny strictly avoid photographing?
55. What is Jenny hoping to do in the future?

Section C (10 marks)

Questions 56 to 60 are based on the following passage.

Jake, aged 16, has a grandmother named Rita, who is 70. They live close by, and they even take a French class together twice a week at a local college. After class they sometimes stop at a café for a snack. On one occasion Rita tells Jake, “I think it’s great how fast you pick up new grammar. It takes me a lot longer.” Jake replies, “Yeah, but you don’t seem to make as many silly mistakes on the quizzes as I do. How do you do that?”

At that moment, Rita and Jake stumble across an interesting set of differences between older and younger minds. Popular psychology says that as people age their brains “slow down”. The implication, of course, is that elder men and women are not as mentally agile as middle-aged adults or even teenagers. However, although certain brain functions such as perception and reaction time do indeed take longer, that slowing down does not necessarily undermine mental sharpness. Indeed, evidence shows that older people are just as mentally fit as younger people because their brains compensate for some kinds of declines in creative ways that young minds do not exploit.

Just as people’s bodies age at different rates, so do their minds. As adults advance in age, the perception of sights, sounds and smells takes a bit longer, and laying down new information into memory becomes more difficult. The ability to retrieve memories also quickly slides and it is sometimes harder to concentrate and maintain attention.

On the other hand, the ageing brain can create significant benefits by tapping into its extensive hoard of accumulated knowledge and experience. The biggest trick that older brains employ is to use both hemispheres simultaneously to handle tasks for which younger brains rely predominantly on one side. Electronic images taken by cognitive scientists at the University of Michigan, for example, have demonstrated that even when doing basic recognition or memorization exercises, seniors exploit the left and right sides of the brain more extensively than men and women who are decades younger. Drawing on both sides of the brain gives them a tactical edge, even if the speed of each hemisphere's process is slower.

In another experiment, Michael Falkenstein of the University of Dortmund in Germany found that when elders were presented with new computer exercises they pause longer before reacting and took longer to complete the tasks, yet they made 50% fewer errors, probably because of their more deliberate pace.

One analogy for these results might be the question of who can type a paragraph "better": a 16-year-old who glides along at 60 words per minute but has to double back to correct a number of mistakes or a 70-year-old who strikes keys at only 40 words per minute but spends less time fixing errors? In the end, if "better" is defined as completing a clean paragraph, both people may end up taking the same amount of time.

Questions 56 to 60

Complete the summary below with information from the passage, using no more than three words for each blank.

The conversation between Jake and Rica is used to give an example of the changes that occur in our brains over time. People's bodies and (56) _____ grow older at varying stages. As we age our senses take longer to process information and our aptitude for retrieving (57) _____ also decreases.

However, older people's brains do have several advantages. Firstly, they can call upon both the (58) _____ which are already stored in their brain. Secondly, though the (59) _____ of each side of their brain is reduced, they are able to use both sides at once. In the last paragraph, the analogy is used to illustrate the point that working faster does not always (60) _____.

Part V Translation (20 marks)

Section A (10 marks)

Translate the following paragraph into Chinese. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

61. The method of scientific investigation is nothing but the expression of the necessary mode of working of the human mind; it's simply the mode by which all phenomena are reasoned about and given precise and exact explanation. The difference between the operations and methods of a baker weighing out his goods in common scales, and the operations of a chemist by means of his balance isn't that the scales in the one case, and the balance in the other, differ in the principles of their construction or manner of working; but that the latter is a much finer apparatus and of course much more accurate in its measurement than the former.

Section B (10 marks)

Translate the following paragraph into English. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

62. 从来就没有完美的幸福。人类不存在尽善尽美的状况。无论幸福可能是别的什么东西,它既不在于财富也不在于成就,而是在于追求的过程。我们要时刻牢记,我们生来并不是享受幸福而是追求幸福。幸福在于追求的本身,在于追求我们终生为之奋斗并从中获得启迪的有意义的事情,也就是说在于追求的过程。

Part VI Error Correction (10 marks)

There are 10 errors altogether in the following passage. Each indicated line contains a maximum of one error. Correct the passage in the following ways: for a wrong word, underline the wrong word and write the correct one in the blank; for a missing word, mark the position of the missing word with the sign “^” and write the word you believe to be missing in the blank; for an unnecessary word, cross the unnecessary word with the sign “\” and put the word with the sign in the blank. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

For example:

One of my favourite writers are Charlotte Brontë. She was born in the early is nineteenth century when women had far fewer opportunities ^ they have now. than She lived in a small village in Yorkshire and she took \ a great pleasure in a walking on the moors near her home.

When I was a little girl, my brother and I went every New Year to stay with grandma and grandpa in their mysteriously old cottage 63. _____ by sea. Like many other houses in the village it was rumoured to be 64. _____ haunted. One particular evening, a couple of day before New Year’s 65. _____ Eve, the house was bitterly cold and rather gloomy because it had been snowing heavy all day. All of us were sitting around the fire in the living 66. _____ room listen to one of grandma’s favourite stories, when suddenly there 67. _____ was a very big crash from upstairs above. All our thoughts turned to 68. _____ the ghost she had been telling us with and we looked at each other 69. _____ in horror. When we rush up the stairs, however, we discovered 70. _____ that the branch of a tree had snapped in the wind and broke one of 71. _____ the bedroom windows into pieces. I’ll always remember the expression on grandma face. “I’ve never been so scared in all my life! ” was all 72. _____ she could whisper.

Part VII Writing (30 marks)

Section A (10 marks)

73. The flowchart below shows how chocolate is made. Summarise the information by selecting and reporting the main features and make comparisons where relevant.

Write a report in 100–120 words on the answer sheet.

Section B (20 marks)

74. Think of something you learned successfully in your life (e.g. a school subject, to ride a bike, to drive, to knit). How did you learn the skill? Was it easy or difficult to learn? How did you feel when you could do it?

Write an article in 140–180 words in an appropriate style on the answer sheet.
