Conversation One

- W I'm afraid not, Phil. I'm about to go to Rome for a conference and I won't be able to finish the report before I go.
- M Oh. When do you think it will be ready?
- W The conference only lasts three days, so I'm not in Rome for long—just the weekend. (6) Then I'll be working on the report all next week.
- M Can you do it before we have the departmental meeting at the end of the month?
- W Oh, I'll easily have finished it by next Friday.
- M That's great. Are you giving a talk at the conference?
- W Yes, the same one I gave last month on plant diversity and environmental changes. (7) By the end of the year I will have given the same talk at six conferences! Luckily it's a different audience each time, but I'll soon be getting polite requests to do something different! The funny thing is I still get nervous every time before I give it.
- M Oh come on, I don't believe that.
- W No, it's true. (8) I'll be feeling really nervous when I get to Rome. I won't be able to relax until I finish my talk. Don't you get nervous when you give talks at conferences?
- M Not really, although I always make sure I prepare well. I always practise in front of a mirror. (9) Before I give the talk I'll have rehearsed it at least ten times. Practising like that makes me feel confident—you should try it.
- W That's a good idea. But even practice doesn't seem to help me.
- M Well, good luck, I'll be thinking of you in Rome. When are you leaving?
- W Well, I was going to leave this morning but they cancelled my flight, so I'm on the evening flight. (10) Actually, I'd better get a move on, as the train to the airport leaves in 20 minutes.

Conversation Two

- M Hi, there!
- W Morning, or should I say afternoon?
- M I'm not late, am I?
- W Only a few minutes today, but you're never exactly early, are you?
- M (11)(12) It's the traffic. There were queues of buses stopping anything from moving up London Road.
- W (11)(12) But that's where you're wrong. It's the cars that make traffic jams because there are so many of them, and most of the time they have just one person in them—like you! At least the buses have more than one person in them. Anyway, I don't know why you don't come to work on your bike. You'd pass all the jams, and you'd be fitter.
- M I just don't accept that. What about the air I'd breathe while I was cycling? I'd get wet in the rain, and I'd arrive at work all hot and sticky.
- W But you wouldn't if you allowed enough time to come across the park. It's really quite pleasant riding that way, and it's not much further. And it's cheaper.
- M (13) Yeah, anything would be cheaper than the buses in this town. If they weren't so expensive, more people would take them. They should make them cheaper or employers should pay part of people's bus fares. That would cut the traffic and we'd all get to work in much less time.
- W And it'd be healthier for everyone, whether they were on a bike or not.
- M If the buses weren't so old and smelly. Some of them are terrible.
- W But so are cars and lorries, of course. So, are you getting the bus tomorrow, then?

- M Well, I might consider it but unfortunately the bus stop's a long way from my flat so I'd have to get up earlier, and tomorrow's my day off anyway.
- W (14) Honestly, I sometimes wonder how you manage to get out of bed in the morning!
- M Well, I don't have to tomorrow.
- W (15) So we'd better get on with some work now.
- M OK. OK.

The Forbidden City has been a silent witness to history as the centre of the Chinese empire and (21) administration for the country's last two feudal dynasties, during which it was home to 24 emperors.

In 1925, the once-restricted complex, which is celebrating the 600th anniversary of its completion this year, opened its doors to visitors and became home to the Palace Museum.

Since then, it has been a (22) magnet for photographers, who have tried to capture the faded glory behind its formidable walls and interpret the palace in their own ways.

The 78-year-old has entered the Forbidden City hundreds of times. He tries to prove, "a good picture is worth a thousand words".

"Besides the gigantic ancient structures, I hope that my photos can reflect the human stories of the times, such as the emperors, courtiers, concubines and servants who lived inside—their ambitions and fears, their laughter and tears," Li says.

He says that, viewed through his lens, the palace complex is (25) mysterious and magnificent, and is the symbol of imperial power. He hopes his images can tell the stories of the voiceless.

(29) Zacharias Jansen from Holland made the first microscope in about 1590. Through it, objects appeared nine times bigger than their real size, but it did not give a very clear picture. Number of Bachelor's Degrees by Selected Fields of Study

The bar charts visually show similarities and differences between men and women earning bachelor's degrees in different majors in 2010 and 2020. In 2010, there were more than five times as many men as women going into engineering. Ten years later, the numbers doubled, reached 78,000 and 10,000 respectively. This phenomenon was also reflected in computer and information science. While in psychology and education, women significantly outnumbered men. The number of women who chose education reached nearly 80,000 in 2020, and there was only 21,000 men chose education. Over the past decade, the number of people choosing to study psychology, biology and biomedical sciences increased dramatically. I Learned to Drive Finally

Driving a car has become one of the skills that almost everyone have to acquire in modern society. You can even find “a driving license is preferred” in the recruitment paper! A few years ago, I decided to get a driving license. The process consisted of traffic theory test and driving practice. Only by passing all the tests can you get a driving license.

In fact, the car was “big” for me. It was not easy to control this “big” thing with a small steering wheel, especially when I was practicing on the road. Driving straightly was easy. But when it came to overtaking and turning, I sweated my palms, thinking whether I turned on the indicator light. I was even afraid of stepping on the pedal to accelerate. Although the coach sit on the co-pilot to assist me, there were still many times I felt nervous. Once I braked so hard that the coach was bounced! I almost crashed the car in front of me. How dangerous! Fortunately, through constant study and practice, I have mastered the skill of driving. Now, I can enjoy the convenience brought by driving!

Whether a new skill is difficult or easy to acquire depends on the person. What is important is that in the process of learning, one learns to persist and surpass oneself!
