1. W If we can convince the next generation that smoking isn't "cool", eventually we might be able to eradicate smoking.

W Yeah, Andy, I was home schooled during high school. (11) I was home schooled for six years actually, my whole high school experience. It was good but it was bad. There were things that I liked and there were things that I didn't like. For instance, I didn't have quite as many friends as I could have. (12) The reason I was home schooled was because I was always traveling with my family and I wasn't able to stay at home and go to school five days a week. But the classes were good. I had almost the same classes as everybody else did. I learned the same things. I just learned them in a different environment by myself.

M So how did you make friends?

W Well, (13) when you're home schooled, there are these things called home school groups, which are kind of social organizations composed of other students who are home schooled, and you get together once or twice a week and you might have a class together. Maybe you are all taking the same subject and then you'll have a real teacher coming and giving you a class or (13) sometimes it's just a social event and you just go hang out and play games. And I met a lot of people this way but sometimes the people were a little odd and they never really became my good friends.

M So during home schooling did your mom teach you or was it largely self study?

W Well, my mom actually didn't do very much work because (14) we subscribed to a program where we ordered academic online classes from a real high school in another part of the country. So I was sitting in a room watching a real class on a computer screen. It was almost as if I was in the real class because there was somebody in the back of the room with a video camera. So my mom didn't have to do too much work because I was taught via web, and (15) when I did my homework and my tests and exams, my mother sent my work back to this school where they graded it and kept my grades.

16. The amount of plastic waste flowing into the ocean could triple in 20 years unless businesses and governments act to reduce plastic production. That warning comes from a new study that appeared recently in the publication Science. The study, called "Breaking the Plastic Wave", identified measures that could reduce plastic pollution that gets into the ocean by 80 percent. If no action is taken, however, the amount of plastic going into the sea every year will rise from 11 million metric tons to 29 million metric tons by 2040, the study said.

17. Recent studies show that some recovered patients who tested negative for coronavirus antibodies developed T cells in their immune systems. The reaction is believed to be the result of their COVID-19 infection. The studies are small and have yet to be confirmed by outside experts. However, some scientists now say that people who show few signs of sickness from the new coronavirus, or show no signs at all, may be actually killing off the infection with their T cells. The findings add to the evidence that an effective COVID-19 vaccine will need to push T cells to work in addition to producing antibodies.

B【解析】 根据新闻定位句可知,一些科学家现在表示,那些很少表现出感染新冠病毒的迹象,或者根本没有表现出感染新冠病毒的迹象的人,实际上可能正在用他们的 T 细胞杀死感染。研究结果进一步证明,有效的 COVID-19 疫苗除了产生抗体外,还需要推动 T 细胞发挥作用。也就是说,T 细胞有利于对抗冠状病毒。故选 B。

18. The pandemic hasn't yet peaked in the UK, but many shoppers have been stocking up on essentials such as toilet paper, hand wash and long-life foods. Some stores have imposed purchase limits on in-demand goods. Online delivery services have been running at full capacity. The message published in newspapers today and tomorrow is signed by many brands. It says they're doing everything possible to ensure shelves are stocked, but points out that buying more than is needed can sometimes mean that others will be left without. It also seeks to reassure the public there is enough for everyone if we all work together.

C【解析】 根据新闻定位句可知,许多品牌正在尽一切可能确保货架上的商品充足,但同时也指出,购买超过需求的商品有时可能意味着其他商品会缺货。因此,信息发布的目的是劝说购物者不要购买超出他们需要的东西。故选 C。

19. Many people assume that it's temperature that influences the pain experienced by those who live with conditions such as arthritis. But researchers found that rather than a cold snap, participants felt the greatest pain on days during which there was high humidity. Low air pressure and windy conditions were also linked to painful days. Dry, still days were the least likely to be painful. The researchers say their findings could help to develop a pain forecast, which would allow people to plan activities for the least painful days. It could also throw light on the mechanisms of pain and lead to the development of new treatments.

B【解析】 根据新闻定位句可知,参与者在高湿度的日子里感到了最大的疼痛。故选 B。

20. From artificial lights to late-night TV and now our smartphones, modern life is often blamed for ruining our sleep. But this study suggests our ancestors didn't get any more sleep than we do. The researchers monitored traditional societies in Namibia, Tanzania and Bolivia, where people live like ancient hunter-gatherers once did. They found they slept on average six and a half hours a night. Surprisingly, natural light didn't have as big an influence as was thought. Most people fell asleep hours after sunset.

D【解析】 根据新闻定位句可知,研究表明我们的祖先的睡眠时间并不比我们多,他们平均每晚睡 6.5 小时。也就是说,一晚上平均睡眠 6.5 小时是正常的时长。故选 D。

Section D

Dictation

If you go to work, you're probably familiar with the routine of travelling to the office, hunting for an available desk, completing your tasks and then enduring your commute home. In many ways, it seems like an (21) outdated working practice. And maybe that's why more and more of us are now choosing to work from home.

In the UK, figures from the Office for National Statistics show more than one and a half million people work from home for their main job. But, although logging on from the comfort of your sofa may appeal, some people are forced to work from home and find it hard going. Marketing consultant Mark Black told the BBC he struggled to (22) switch off from work when he was based solely at home. He says: “I hate home working. You get up in the morning and stare at the same four walls, do your work, and try and clock off, but you can’t.” And as Emma Mamo from mental health charity Mind says: “Home workers don’t always have (23) the same opportunities to connect with people as their office-based colleagues.”

But remote working doesn’t always mean being at home. Cafes and workplace spaces offer a chance for workers, particularly self-employed people, to come together and (24) interact with each other. There are also employees who have no choice but to work remotely because their companies have decided to do away with offices altogether to have a more agile workforce—it’s certainly very cost effective and attractive for start-ups. But for those employed by businesses with a physical base, working at home provides (25) a convenient alternative to the 9 to 5. And without the distraction of their colleagues, it can be the most productive place to work!

Summary

(26) There is probably no other country in the world with such a diverse and distinctive cuisine as India. For Indians food is a gift from the gods and is treated with respect, and this respect extends to their attention to manners while eating.

(27) The ingredients of an Indian meal are based on six flavors—sweet, salty, bitter, acidic, sour, and pungent. (28) Within these flavors, each region of India has developed its own cuisine using different combinations of spices. Throughout India, the most popular dish is thali, a combination meal containing individual serving—consisting of rice and vegetables with meat, chicken, or fish. Thalīs, along with most other Indian main courses, are served with lentil soup, curd and bread. Tandoori style dishes are also common throughout India.

(26) Along with this rich variety of food, India has developed some interesting table manners, which are in contrast to those of other nations. Noticeable among these is that (29) most Indians eat using their right hands, but never with their left hands, which are considered unclean. This is very different from most Westerners, who use knives, forks, and spoons to eat. Also, there is a more formal arrangement with regard to seating in India, with people sitting in a clockwise direction, starting with the eldest.

(30) The food in India is certainly unique and reflects the character and colors of Indian culture. This, along with its universally admired taste, has resulted in India’s food becoming its most popular export, with curry a dish that everybody knows.

71. 过去,很少有企业尝试成为环境的朋友。他们普遍认为保护环境就意味着赔钱。如今,企业面临“走向绿色”的压力。同时,他们意识到保护环境能够带来良好的收益。
企业走向绿色的压力来自几个方面。第一,能源价格一直在上升。这刺激了人们对能耗更低的产品的巨大需求。第二,许多政府部门要求企业降低污染程度。这帮助加速了“清洁”技术的发展。第三,消费者们越来越关注诸如全球变暖方面的问题。一项近期研究表明,66%的人更愿意购买环境友好型公司的产品。

During 1996 to 2002, the output fluctuated slightly in the first four years and then dropped in the next two years.

In recent years, China's total food output realized stable growing with the support of our country's beneficial policies in agriculture. The safe strategy of food carried out in 2014 not only guaranteed abundant food to provide domestic but also secured high quality of food. With this trend, our food will become more diversified and be with higher quality!

Policy of Roadside Businesses

People are now allowed to set up temporary roadside businesses. Cities around China have started to set up roadside booths or food stalls on streets regularly on weekends. I favour this policy strongly.

On one hand, roadside businesses promote employment, which improves people's living conditions and enrich their lives. Especially because of this year's epidemic, many businesses are facing a crisis of survival, and some even closed down. Roadside business is one way out. Many people can solve not only the problem of employment but also the problem of family income. From this point of view, this policy is a strong support for this group, and provides a guarantee for this group. For those who utilize their spare time to do roadside business, it enriches their spiritual life.

On the other hand, roadside businesses improve residents' willingness and ability to consume. This is what our nation has always advocated. Statistics show that compared with developed countries, the per capita consumption level of Chinese residents is low. China is the world's second largest economy and second largest consumer market. This policy benefits our nation's demand for stimulating economy.

All in all, this policy favours both our people and our country!
