Section A (5 marks)

Read the following passage and fill in the blanks with the correct forms of 5 words or phrases out of the 7 given in the box. Write the answers on the answer sheet.

sure; confident; addition; at the mercy of; legal; responsible; as well as

A football referee is a special trained and selected individual who is in charge of controlling the players and (41) _____ that all the rules and regulations are followed. A football referee is an extremely important sporting position. In fact, it is fair to say that without referees the world's most popular game could not go ahead at all!

Up until very recently, being a referee was an (42) _____ activity to a full-time job, or something done as a hobby. For example, a science teacher could also be a referee in Premier league games. Then refereeing became fully professional, with stricter rules regarding (43) _____, qualifications and skills. Referees became nearly as popular as the players. A characteristic example is Pierluigi Collina, the greatest football referee of all time. The former Italian football referee was a recognizable figure even to those who didn't follow football.

Refereeing work is mainly done outdoors on pitches, or in sports halls for five-a-side football. This means that referees are at times (44) _____ the weather. Bad weather is 100% out of their control. They can't control the conditions on the pitch, such as high temperature, humidity, rain or wind. Refereeing Students at Pratt Institute in New York believe that in the future people will be eating food wrappers and packages. They have created drinking straws made of sugar and seaweed, and plates and bowls made of mushrooms. What do you think? Will you help make the plastic pile a thing of the past?

Part IV Reading Comprehension (30 marks)

There are three passages in this part. Each passage is followed by several questions. Respond to the questions using the information from the passage. Remember to write the answers on the answer sheet.

Section A (10 marks)

Questions 51 — 55 are based on the following passage.

You've probably heard it before — a friend or relative nostalgically recalling their time at university as 'the best years of my life' There's good reason to believe them, too. After all, for most people, going to university is their first taste of real independence, particularly if they have to live away from the family home (51) _____

These include looking after themselves, budgeting their money, and learning responsibility by attending their classes and submitting academic work on time Plus, at the end of the course, they've achieved their aim of earning a degree and, for many people, the status associated with having a university education. Not everyone, however, is cut out for academic studies.

So what alternatives are there for teens who finish school, but don't think university is for them? That was the problem facing Tom Mursell. After completing his secondary school studies, he opted out of university, but was unable to find information online about the alternatives. That's when 'notgoingtouni' was born. Tom founded the website in 2008 and since then, he has helped thousands of young people to create their own path in life. (52) _____ Its popularity is in no doubt: there are over 100,000 visitors to notgoingtouni.co.uk every month, making it the leading website in the UK helping school leavers to make better decisions about their future.. It brings the wealth of opportunities that exist outside of traditional university courses together in one place. The options include apprenticeships, diplomas, distance learning, gap years and jobs.

(53) _____ What if you feel you're not ready yet? Take a gap year—it'll give you time to think and prevent you from rushing into a bad choice. What if you can't decide? The best way to prepare for what's ahead is by getting to know yourself better, understanding what makes you happy, discovering your strengths, and being realistic. Perhaps that's easier said than done. So how can you find out more about yourself? An excellent way to do this is to ask people you like, trust and respect what job they think might suit your strengths and personality: parents, grandparents and teachers are ideal. They can be more objective about you than you can be about yourself. You might be surprised by their opinion of you, but it's very useful to know what you're good at and, equally important, what you can improve.

(54) _____ For example, if you are organised, interested in science, good at problem solving and with numbers, and like the idea of further study at university, you'd probably make a great forensic scientist. But if university isn't for you, the same qualities and an apprenticeship could lead you in a different direction, like plumbing.

Whether you become a scientist or a plumber, a teacher or a hairdresser, your starting point for a happy and successful working life is to choose a job that suits your individual qualities best. (55) _____ There's a whole world of incredible opportunities just waiting for you.

Questions 51 — 55

Choose from the sentences A — G the one which best fits each gap of 51 — 55. There are two extra sentences which you do not need to use.

- A. Some school leavers volunteer for unpaid work helping poor people in places like Africa and Asia before continuing their studies.
- B. It's a great resource for students, parents and career advisors alike.
- C. By combining your strengths and personality traits with your interests, you'll be able to find the best fit for you.
- D. Along with enjoying the freedom to go out whenever and with whomever they choose, they learn some valuable life lessons.
- E. One of the advantages of on-the-job training schemes is that young people can start work straight from school.
- F. However, working out what to do professionally — whether it involves university or not — can be tricky.
- G. Don't waste time or energy trying to achieve an unrealistic goal or worse, doing nothing at all.

Section B (10 marks)

Questions 56 — 60 are based on the following passage.

One of the joys of travelling is discovering like-minded people who share your passions and interests. If you're a hipster (赶时髦的人), you'll love these cool destinations which enjoy the reputation of being the hippest in the world.

Amsterdam-Noord in Amsterdam, Netherlands

Hipsters are fond of bicycles and you'll see loads of bikes in the Dutch capital. City authorities say there are over 600,000 bikes in Amsterdam, so it's no surprise that this city is hipster friendly. Most of the hipster action is in the north of the city ('noord' in Dutch), in the industrial, but cool neighbourhood of Amsterdam-Noord. To get there, take the ferry in the direction of the NDSM Wharf and disembark in the creative hot spot of Amsterdam. Here, the old buildings have been transformed into galleries and art studios by cultural entrepreneurs and there's even a skateboarding park. Regular cutting-edge festivals and exhibitions are held here.

Shimokitazawa in Tokyo, Japan

In western Tokyo, you'll find Shimokitazawa, a cool district packed with antique shops, galleries, tiny bars, cheap and cheerful restaurants, cafés and live music venues. Tokyo is a concrete jungle, but the hustle and bustle of this huge metropolis with its constant noise and bright lights is absent in the Shimokitazawa neighbourhood, which is fairly quiet. However, it is by no means boring. For the hipsters of Tokyo, this is the place to be. The area has a reputation for trendsetting in youth culture, and you'll see the coolest Tokyoites here showing off their style. Most streets are pedestrian-only, so it's perfect for dog-walking, lazy exploring and browsing.

Fitzroy in Melbourne, Australia

Melbourne is far away from the globe's cultural hot spots, but this city on the Yarra River has repeatedly won the title of 'the world's most liveable city'. Part of its charm are the inner-city areas that surround the centre. Perhaps the coolest of them all is Fitzroy, accessible by tram from the downtown area. Its main avenue, Brunswick Street, is full of the cheap eateries and trendy, retro cafés you'd expect to find in the hip neighbourhood. There's also an interesting mix of rich and poor: broke university students, followers of fashion, artists and of course 20-something hipsters. This neighbourhood is bursting with creativity, including street art and graffiti, which you can view on an official tour.

Shoreditch in London, UK

This is the London you won't find in the guidebooks, so if going off the beaten track appeals to you, visit Shoreditch. This East London neighbourhood is home to London's trendsetters. Head to the Brick Lane Market, where you'll see the fashionably dressed crowds showing their truly eccentric British style. Despite the arrival of money, much of the area has kept its original rough, unsophisticated look; many of the walls and shop fronts are covered with graffiti.

Of course, for many people the dirt is part of the attraction. Explore on foot then take a break at a café and spend the afternoon people watching.

Questions 56 — 60

Answer the following questions with the information given in the passage.

56. Where is Amsterdam-Noord located?

57. What does Shimokitazawa have a reputation for?

58. What title has Melbourne repeatedly won?

59. What can visitors see on an official tour of Melbourne?

60. What do fashionably dressed crowds like to do on the Brick Lane Market?

Section C (10 marks)

Questions 61 — 65 are based on the following passage.

In recent years, there has been growing concern by researchers and indeed the older generation that the younger generation are somewhat disengaged from the news, and as a result have a very narrow view of the world around them. This, however, couldn't be further from the truth, as shown by a recent study carried out by the Media Insight Project. According to this research, 85% of youngsters say that keeping up to date with the news is important to them, and 69% receive news on a daily basis.

Perhaps what some of the older generation fail to understand is that just because the younger generation does not buy a daily newspaper, it doesn't mean that they don't follow the news. Born into a digital age, or more specifically the age of the Internet, the younger generation simply accesses news through the digital devices they grew up using: laptops, tablets, smartphones, etc. A recent study produced by Ofcom revealed that 60% of youngsters in the UK use the Internet or apps for news, compared to just 21% of those in the older age range.

Social media also plays an important part in consuming the news for the younger generation. It was also revealed that most youngsters actually don't seek out news from social media, but choose to follow it once they see it there. In other words, they encounter it accidentally and therefore following the news is secondary. For example, when accessing social media sites, news headlines automatically appear. These catch the user's eye and consequently the new link is clicked and followed.

For the moment, social networks are being used selectively, however. For example, social media is used for breaking news, but is not relied on in terms of accuracy. For hard news topics, such as economics or local crime, youngsters continue to look to original sources. For accuracy and reliability, television is still the preferred choice for both generations.

According to Alison Preston, Head of Media Literacy Research at Ofcom, motivations for following the news also vary according to the generation. In her current report on the topic, she states that, for the young generation, news is largely about convenience and being social. For the older generation, however, motivation is greatly linked to a sense of duty and habit.

Overall, it is fair to say that news plays an important part in all our everyday lives, regardless of generation. However, what is different amongst the generations is why and how it is accessed.

Questions 61 — 65

Complete the summary below with information from the passage, using no more than three words for each blank.

Recent research shows that news is of (61) _____ to both younger and older generations. However, their ways to access the news and why they consume the news vary. While the older generation would like to buy a newspaper to follow the news, most youngsters prefer to keep up to date through (62) _____. They also consume the news from (63) _____. Meanwhile, compared with the old people who seek the news actively, young people largely encounter the news by chance. Furthermore, both generations would choose television as a news source when they focus on the (64) _____. Regarding the reasons why they seek news, the older generation follow their sense of (65) _____. whereas the younger generation mainly want to be social and convenient.

Part V Translation (15 marks)

Section A (5 marks)

Translate the following paragraph into Chinese. Write the answer on the answer sheet.

66. These days, social media is doing more harm than good with young men and women becoming increasingly insecure due to unrealistic beauty standards. Social media is both the joy and the curse of the 21st century. In one way, the digital age has opened us up to another world, created jobs we never knew before and connected people the world over. On the other hand, the pressure to keep up with the trend online has become a morbid (病态的) cycle which is destroying lives one click at a time. In particular, men and women have found themselves battling identity issues due to the unrealistic beauty standards set by what they see on social media.
