Dictation

Listen to the passage. For questions 21—25, fill in the blanks with the exact words and phrases you hear.

The way the mind works is heavily influenced by culture, according to University of Michigan psychologist Richard Nisbett. He says that two people from different cultures can look at the same picture and see it in different ways. Nisbett explains that Asians think differently from Westerners because their culture teaches them to be (21) _____ society, family, and historical context. Western culture—especially American culture—tends to pay more attention to individual success and (22) _____ of family.

Nisbett argues that culture makes East Asians global thinkers. When trying to understand a situation, East Asians like to see the whole picture. They trust feelings and (23) _____ to relationships because these are valued highly in their culture. Conversely, Westerners tend to be more analytical. When they try to understand something, they usually prefer to analyze small pieces of information first and build their knowledge piece by piece in order to understand the whole picture.

In one experiment, Japanese and Americans viewed the same underwater scenes and reported what they had seen. The result showed that most of the Americans started by (24) _____. However, the Japanese talked about the environment or context first.

This research confirms the traditional idea that Americans are less interested in social context and place importance on the individual. The Japanese, (25) _____, place more importance on social context.

Part IV Reading Comprehension (35 marks)

Read the following passages. Each passage is followed by several questions. Respond to the questions using information from the passage. Remember to write the answers on the answer sheet.

Section A (5 marks)

Questions 56—60 are based on the following passage.

For the past twenty years, Dilip Sardesai and his wife Andrija have run a small stationer's shop in the university city of Newcastle, in the northeast of England. As well as selling paper, pens, computer and office equipment, they also offer a photocopying and fax service. Dilip sees the personal contact he has with his customers as the most important part of his job. "Many of our customers are from the university," says Dilip. "We've seen generations of students come and go—we like to offer them the kind of personal service they can't get in a larger shop."

Nicole Parnot is the manageress of a Forum hypermarket, situated 20 kilometres from Arras, a town in the northeast of France. Forum has 600 stores in five different countries and plans to expand into Eastern Europe. The huge hypermarket employs over 300 people, and has parking spaces for over 3,000 cars. "People nowadays have busy lives," says Nicole, "so we try to attract families by offering them a complete shopping experience including a full restaurant service and free entertainment for the children. We try to make it possible for shoppers to do all their weekly shopping in one place. People come here not only for food and household goods, but also clothes, electrical goods, books, CDs ... in fact, we sell everything from peanuts to personal computers! "

Five years ago, Dave Stirling had the idea of selling CDs over the Internet. The business he started from his home in Ohio, the USA, now sells 500,000 CDs a year and has made him a millionaire at the age of twenty-four. "I could see right away that this was the future shopping," says Stirling. "Why should you pay $15 for a CD—and spend the time and money getting to the store and parking your car—when, by clicking on your computer, you can have the same CD brought to your door for half the cost?" According to Stirling, this is only the beginning. Then one day we will do all our shopping over the Internet: It is easier, quicker and cheaper. That is what we are experiencing now.

Questions 56—60

Complete the chart with no more than three words from the passage.

Owner	Shop	Location	Items	Service
Dilip Sardesai and Andrija	a small stationer's shop	in the university city of Newcastle, in the (56) _____	paper, pens, computer and office equipment	a photocopying and (57) _____
Nicole Parnot	a Forum hypermarket	20 kilometres from Arras, a town in the northeast of France	everything; from peanuts to (58) _____	parking spaces; full restaurant service; (59) _____ for kids
Dave Stirling	a shop (60) _____	in Ohio, USA	CDs	easier, quicker and cheaper service

Section B (10 marks)

Questions 61—65 are based on the following passage.

(61) _____ She still has to research and write the 10-page paper. Emily's problem is procrastination (拖延症). She has waited to do her work until the very last second and now she is stressed and has to work through the night to complete her paper. Procrastination is a problem for many students, but it does not have to be. Instead of waiting to start your homework until just before the deadline, you can follow these simple steps.

(62) _____ For instance, in Emily's case, she could have spent 30 minutes a day working on that research paper and divided her work into sections. One week could have been spent doing research, one week writing an outline, one week writing the first draft, and the final week could have been spent revising and finalizing the paper.

(63) _____ Treat your work like any other commitments (承诺) you have, like classes, extracurricular activities, or a job. Remember, you are the boss and it is up to you to follow your schedule. Be disciplined and do not make any other plans during the time you have set aside that will prevent you from doing your work.

(64) _____ For instance, if you are writing a paper, do not go on the Internet to check your email or see who else is online, and do not have a TV in the room. Instead, focus on the work you planned for that time. Afterwards, you can reward yourself for your hard work by doing whatever you want—socializing with friends, or surf the Internet. You will probably enjoy yourself more because you will not have the work hanging over your head and stressing you out.

(65) _____ However, do not put yourself in Emily's shoes and leave work until the last minute. It is easy to make some simple changes in the way you work to prevent it from happening.

Questions 61—65

Complete the passage with the following sentences. There are two extra sentences that you do not need to use.

- A. First, do a little bit every day rather than all at once.
- B. It is important for students to do their work in a quiet room so they have less stress.
- C. Schedule that study time into your daily activities.
- D. You should try some of the ideas for your next research paper.
- E. Procrastination is a common mistake that many students make.
- F. Once you have organized your time in this way, it is important to find a place to work where there are few distractions.
- G. It is the night before the research paper is due, and Emily Regan knows that she will be up all night.

Section C (10 marks)

Questions 66—70 are based on the following passage.

We now take photography very much for granted. We can hardly imagine newspapers, magazines and books without photographs. Scientists, doctors and policemen and many other people use photography daily in their work. And of course we all love to take photos of family, friends and places we visited.

Yet photography is less than two hundred years old. The first photograph was taken in 1826 by a Frenchman, Joseph Nicéphore Niépce. It was of a view from his window. The photograph was on a metal plate, and the exposure took eight hours. For the next forty years or so, though there were many developments in photography, cameras remained heavy and expensive. Photographs were made on large glass plates. Exposures were at least one or two seconds. Tripods (三脚架) were essential. The photographer also needed knowledge and equipment to process his work.

Then, in 1888 an American named George Eastman manufactured a small hand-held box camera. This took 100 circular photographs on a roll of film. Moreover, the photographer simply sent the exposed roll to the Kodak Company for processing. The Kodak slogan was: “You press the button, we do the rest!” The age of mass amateur (业余的) photography had arrived.

Nowadays, nearly everyone can afford at least a simple camera. We can make personal records of family life and social occasions. For the first time in history, ordinary people can see what their grandparents and great grandparents looked like.

At first, many painters feared that the birth of photography meant the death of painting. In fact, photography has stimulated the growth of painting over the last two centuries. Because photography is so efficient at accurately recording what people and places look like, artists have felt free to paint in more imaginative ways. They now often make colourful patterns, perhaps getting their ideas from what they see, but not trying to record it “photographically”.

Questions 66—70

Answer the following questions according to the passage.

66. When was photography invented?
67. What two changes in photography happened from 1826 to 1888, before George Eastman’s box camera was made?
68. What was George Eastman’s contribution to photography?
69. What is the Chinese meaning of the Kodak slogan?
70. Which word could be replaced by “promoted” in the last paragraph?

Section D (10 marks)

Questions 71—75 are based on the following passage.

As the supply of genetically modified (GM) food increases, many people are unaware that some food they are eating is a product of the GM process. Scientists in a laboratory have artificially changed food by copying genes from one cell and putting them into another cell in order to achieve some supposedly desirable result.

Nowadays, there are a variety of GM foods being produced—such as soybean, nuts, and potato. The reason for the modification process is to make these foods resistant to insects and viruses so that farmers do not need to use much herbicide (除草剂). Taking the example of tomatoes, which are sensitive to the weather, they can be inserted with genes from a type of fish that lives in very cold seas so as to survive frost.

Its supporters argue that GM technology is the future of food and has many advantages. They assert that because of GM food's stronger resistance to nature's forces, farmers can produce better harvests. Moreover, it can increase the worldwide supply of food, which can in turn help those areas suffering from food shortages. In addition, common food such as bananas and tomatoes can be injected with vaccines for illnesses to help prevent the spread of serious diseases.

Nevertheless, there has been increased concern about the dangers of GM food. Some people have an unusual reaction to specific proteins called allergens (过敏原). Nuts and soybeans are two of the major sources of these allergies, and reactions to these foods can be life threatening. In addition, the ecosystem might be destroyed by the GM process—the practice of feeding animals with GM crops could lead to health problems related to growth or metabolism (新陈代谢).

The U.S., Canada, and Argentina, the world's three largest producers of GM foods, have challenged countries that protect against GM products. Meanwhile, the EU has urged for a wise and careful approach to this matter, labeling products containing GM elements, and some European companies have stopped using GM ingredients. GM food is a complex issue associated with both benefits and risks. The debate on it will continue until we fully examine the long-term consequences.

Questions 71—75

Complete the summary with a maximum of two words from the passage, changing the form where necessary.

Genetic modification refers to the process of copying genes from one cell and putting them into another cell, which is aimed at (71) _____ some supposedly desirable result. More and more genetically modified (GM) food is being produced. It can be (72) _____ to nature's forces, insects and viruses, and benefit farmers and areas that (73) _____ food shortages. Although it has many advantages, there is also increased concern about it. Some countries produce GM foods, while others take measures to (74) _____ GM products. The debate on it will not stop until the long-term consequences are (75) _____.

Part V Translation (15 marks)

Section A (5 marks)

Translate the following paragraph into Chinese. Remember to write the answers on the answer sheet.

76. Ever since I left home to study in London ten years ago, food is a big part of mom's London visits. With each trip, she would be sure to fill the entire fridge with hand-made dumplings, rice cakes, and many other sweets I struggle to find English translations for. Whenever it's time to say goodbye, mom would never say that she misses me. Instead, she will remark casually, "Don't starve yourself while I'm not with you." Mom belongs to a generation where food is an expression of love.

Section B (10 marks)

Translate the underlined sentences in the following passage into English by using the hints given in brackets. Remember to write the answers on the answer sheet.

作文评分标准:

一、评分原则:

1. 本题满分为 Section A 10 分;Section B 20 分,按四个档次给分。
2. 评分时,先根据文章的内容和语言初步确定其所属档次,然后以该档次的要求来衡量,确定或调整本档次,最后给分。
3. Section A 词数少于 100 词或多于 140 的,Section B 词数少于 140 或多于 180 的,从总分中减去 2 分。
4. 如书写较差,以致影响阅卷,将分数降低一档。

二、各档次给分范围和要求

第四档(很好):Section A 9-10 分;Section B 16-20 分

完全符合写作格式的要求,覆盖多个内容要点,表达思想清楚,文字通顺,连贯性很好,基本上无词汇和语法错误。

第三档(好):Section A 6-8 分;Section B 11-15 分

基本符合写作格式的要求,有个别地方表达思想不够清楚,文字基本通顺、连贯,有少量词汇和语法错误。

第二档(一般):Section A 3-5 分;Section B 6-10 分

未恰当完成写作格式的要求,漏掉内容要点,表达思想不清楚,文字多处出现词汇和语法错误,影响了对写作内容的理解。

第一档(差):Section A 1-2 分;Section B 1-5 分

未完成写作格式的要求,明显遗漏主要内容,表达思想紊乱,有较多词汇和语法的重大错误,未能将信息传达给读者。

0 分

Part I Listening Comprehension

Section A

In this section, you will hear five short conversations. Each conversation will be read only once. At the end of each conversation, one question will be asked, and you have fifteen seconds to read the four choices marked A, B, C and D, and decide which is the best answer. Then mark the corresponding letter on the answer sheet with a single line through the centre.

1. W: Hmm ... Look at the sky. I hope the bus comes soon.

M: Yeah, it's begun to get cloudy really suddenly. Five minutes ago it was completely clear.

W: At this rate, it will be raining in another five minutes. Here comes the bus now!

Question: What is the weather like now?

2. W: Sit down, sir. Could you tell me what kind of holiday you like?

M: I want something with a bit of excitement and adventure.

W: How about a Mediterranean cruise? It's really popular with young people, and it's £3,000.

M: It sounds good, but it's too expensive for me. I'd like something cheaper, really.

Question: What job does the woman probably do?

3. M: I have so much to do today and it's already my coffee break and I haven't done any of it.

W: What have you been doing all morning then?

M: I've been sending e-mails and ignoring the financial report and telephone calls I have to make.

Question: What did the man do all morning?

4. W: Dave, what do you want to do once you graduate?

M: Uh ... I haven't decided for sure, but I think I'd like to work for a financial company in this area. How about you?

W: Well, when I first started college, I wanted to major in French, but I realized I might have a hard time finding a job using the language, so I changed my major to computer science. With the right skills, finding a job in the computer industry shouldn't be as difficult.

Question: Why did the woman change her major?

5. W: Hi, Ben! How can I help you?

M: I'm a human resources manager. My best friend Mike has applied for a job at my company. He's the best-qualified candidate, but I'm not sure if I should give him the job.

W: Are you worried about your friendship with him?

M: Yes, I really don't want to disappoint him or lose him as a friend.

W: If I were you, I'd probably give him the job, but I wouldn't give him special treatment. If he's a good worker, I'm sure in time your colleagues won't mind that Mike's your friend.

Question: Why was Ben worried?

Section B

In this section, you will hear two long conversations. Each conversation will be read only once. At the end of each conversation, there will be a one-minute pause. During the pause, read the questions and make your answers on the answer sheet with a single line through the centre.

Conversation One

Listen to the conversation, mark each statement as either true (T) or false (F) according to your listening.

M: Welcome to Norwood University, Sue! How can I help you?

W: I'm thinking about studying here next year. I'd like to know more about the Tourism Management courses.

M: Certainly, what would you like to know?

W: How long's the course, and how many modules do I have to pass?

M: You have to pass ten modules and complete two case studies over the three-year course.

W: OK. I'm also interested in the professional training placement schemes on the course. Who are the placements with?

M: We offer a wide range of placements with a number of excellent companies in the tourism industry. You usually choose the company in your second year.

W: What about when I'm not studying? What extra-curricular activities are popular at the university?

M: You can choose from a variety of activities. We've got an award winning university newspaper. And our women's football and basketball teams have been the inter-university champions for the last two years.

W: Sounds great! When's the deadline for applications?

M: The third week of June, so you need to hurry. There're more details about the application procedure and tuition in the brochure.

W: OK. Thanks for your time.

M: Not at all. Good luck!

Conversation Two

Listen to the conversation, mark each question as A, B, C or D according to what you hear.

M: Hello, Mrs. Parker! We're excited to have you here on "Success Stories". Welcome.

W: Thank you. I'm really honoured to be here. I've never thought about my story being exciting enough to be told on the radio! It just seemed to me to be the normal progression of things, and kind of boring.

M: It isn't boring. It's exciting and inspirational. First of all, what does your company sell?

W: We sell art equipment. About ten years ago I was an artist. I loved what I did, but I was never satisfied with the equipment I had. It seemed to me that there was nothing out there that was both affordable and high-quality. Anyway, one day I was talking to my friend, Jill, who worked building fire trucks. We got to talking about art equipment and he told me that if I designed some things, he would help me build them.

M: Amazing! What happened next? Did you have difficulty designing new products?

W: Not at all. My father is an engineer and I think I have some of those genes. I knew what I wanted and I could use any material I wanted to make them. It was a lot of fun.

M: Was it easy to get your ideas from paper to reality?

W: Not at all. It was hard for me to explain what I wanted and we tried many times with each piece of equipment before we got it right. But in the end, we succeeded. That was how Mirrix Company was born!

Section C

In this section, you will hear five short news items. Each item will be read only once. After each item, there will be a fifteen-second pause. During the pause, read the question and the four choices marked A, B, C and D, and decide which is the best answer. Then mark the corresponding letter on the answer sheet with a single line through the centre.

16. The former NASA astronaut Kelly spoke with Business Insider about the United States' current presence in space. The United States is currently focusing on the International Space Station and a Mars exploration, and is working closely with commercial companies like SpaceX, Blue Origin and Boeing. China has also plowed ahead with their fast-paced space program.
17. The World Happiness Report studied the happiness levels of 156 countries. It considered factors such as life expectancy, social support and corruption in its examination. Finland pushed last year's happiest country, Norway, to the second place. The other three Nordic countries, Denmark, Sweden and Iceland also made the top ten. They are joined by Switzerland, The Netherlands, Canada, New Zealand, and Australia.
18. China is making plans to create a large protected space for one of its most famous creatures: the giant panda. The planned Giant Panda National Park would be two times the size of Yellowstone National Park in the United States. The Bank of China has promised 10 billion yuan to set up the protective area. It will be in the southwestern province of Sichuan, China's forest ministry said.
19. Business Experts predict there will be several changes in the American workforce in the upcoming years. According to Business Insider, James Manyika, chairman of the McKinsey Global Institute, says, "up to one-third of the American workforce may have to learn new skills and change occupations by 2030." Basically, he believes technology will take over simple-tasks jobs, like being cashier, in the near future.
20. The Columbia University Press launched a book series titled "How to Read Chinese Literature", with an eye to transforming the learning and teaching of Chinese literature, language, and culture in the English-speaking world. The series is a collection of Chinese literary anthologies and language texts covering all major literary genres, with non-Chinese students and scholars as target readers. The series is aimed at bridging the gap between learning and teaching for non-Chinese students and scholars.

Section D

In this section, you will hear two short passages. The passages will be read twice. After each passage, there will be a thirty-second pause. During the pause, write the answers on the answer sheet.

Dictation

Listen to the passage. For questions 21—25, fill in the blanks with the exact words and phrases you hear.

The way the mind works is heavily influenced by culture, according to University of Michigan psychologist Richard Nisbett. He says that two people from different cultures can look at the same picture and see it in different ways. Nisbett explains that Asians think differently from Westerners because their culture teaches them to be more aware of society, family, and historical context. Western culture—especially American culture—tends to pay more attention to individual success and being independent of family.

Nisbett argues that culture makes East Asians global thinkers. When trying to understand a situation, East Asians like to see the whole picture. They trust feelings and attach significance to relationships because these are valued highly in their culture. Conversely, Westerners tend to be more analytical. When they try to understand something, they usually prefer to analyze small pieces of information first and build their knowledge piece by piece in order to understand the whole picture.

In one experiment, Japanese and Americans viewed the same underwater scenes and reported what they had seen. The result showed that most of the Americans started by explaining the details. However, the Japanese talked about the environment or context first.

This research confirms the traditional idea that Americans are less interested in social context and place importance on the individual. The Japanese, on the other hand, place more importance on social context.

Summary

Listen to the passage. For questions 26—30, complete the notes using no more than three words for each blank.

The first Starbucks coffee shop opened in 1971 in downtown Seattle, Washington. It was a small coffee shop that roasted its own coffee beans. Its business did well. Things began to change for the company in 1981. That year, Howard Schultz met the three men who ran Starbucks. Schultz worked in New York for a company that made kitchen equipment. He noticed that Starbucks ordered a large number of special coffee makers, and he was curious about the company. He went to Seattle to see what Starbucks did, and he liked what he saw. He wanted to become part of the company. In 1982, the original Starbucks owners hired Schultz as the company's head of marketing.

In 1983, Schultz travelled to Italy. The unique atmosphere of the espresso bars there caught his eye. To him it seemed that Italians spent their daily lives in three places: home, work and coffee bars. His experience in Italy gave him a new idea for Starbucks back in Seattle.

Schultz created a comfortable and casual atmosphere for Starbucks coffee shops. Customers everywhere seemed to like it. Between 1987 and 1992, Starbucks opened 150 new stores, and by the year 2000, three new stores opened somewhere around the world every day. Today, Starbucks has thousands of stores. By working together with a store already in the city, Starbucks gains an understanding of customers, which helps Starbucks open stores in the right locations.

This is the end of the listening part. Please transfer your answers to the answer sheet.
